CPD Employee	Accused UNKNOWN,					ON Duty	The reporting party alleges that she observed a physical and verbal altercation between several black male subjects ("unknown citizens") and several white male City of Chicago employees, with Streets and Sanitation Department. The reporting party alleges that several male and female uniformed officers and supervisors failed to arrest the City of Chicago employees along with the black male citizens. The reporting party alleges that she inquired to a male white uniformed supervisor as to why the city employees were not arrested along with the male citizens. The reporting party alleges that a male white uniformed supervisor stated, "Men generally follow verbal altercation with physical altercation, why are you using such a broad paint brush." The reporting party also alleges that a black female uniformed officer approached her and stated, "That's man law." The reporting party stated that due to the city workers being white males and the citizens being black males, that the officers and supervisors racially profiled the citizens. The reporting party further states that she observed the citizens's vehicle legally parked and from the verbal altercation that the city vehicle almost side swiped the parked vehicle. The reporting party states that Hyde Park bank drive-thru is several feet from where the incident occurred and that she might possibly have photos of the incident on her Android phone.
